Fig. 2 - element 200 should be labeled.

Fig. 3 - element 300 should be labeled.

Fig. 4 - element 400 should be labeled.

Fig. 5 - elements P and D are not clearly labeled (or defined in legend).

Fig. 6 - element 600 should be labeled.

Fig. 7 - element 700 should be labeled.

Fig. 8 - elements P and D are not clearly labeled (or defined in legend).

Fig. 9 – element 900 should be labeled.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 13-24 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the enablement requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to enable one skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and/or use the invention. Claims 13-24 are single means claims and the scope of the claims is not commensurate with the specification.

The MPEP 2164.08(a) defines a Single Means Claim as follows:

A single means claim, i.e., where a means recitation does not appear in combination with another recited element of means, is subject to an undue breadth rejection under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph. In re Hyatt, 708 F.2d 712, 714-715, 218 USPQ 195, 197 (Fed. Cir. 1983) (A single means claim which covered every conceivable means for achieving the stated purpose was held nonenabling for the scope of the claim because the specification disclosed at most only those means known to the inventor.). When claims depend on a recited property, a fact situation comparable to Hyatt is possible, where the claim covers every conceivable structure (means) for achieving the stated property (result) while the specification discloses at most only those known to the inventor.

In the present claims means for providing a control signal, signal generator means, analysis means, clock means, measurement means (and numerous others) are all claimed however there is no disclosure of more than one of the recited elements or means to implement such.

Appropriate correction is required.

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1-90 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The claims in the present application are replete with the use of nonfunctional language such as "wherein" and "adapted to". Language that suggests or makes optional but does not require steps to be performed or does not limit a claim to a particular structure does not limit the scope of a claim or claim limitation. Due to the numerous uses of these phrases, it is not clear what is actually required. See MPEP 2111.04 [R-3]. Appropriate correction is required.

Claims 47-68 recite the equation $k=m+j$ the variable k is not defined in any of the claims and thus the scope of these claims is unclear.

Appropriate correction is required in order to properly compare the present claims to the prior arts.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 36-46 and 80-90 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. Computer programs are not statutory subject matter.

MPEP 2106.01 states in part "...computer programs claimed as computer listings per se, i.e., the descriptions or expressions of the programs, are not physical "things." They are neither computer components nor statutory processes, as they are not "acts" being performed. Such claimed computer programs do not define any structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and other claimed elements of a computer which permit the computer program's functionality to be realized. In contrast, a claimed computer- readable medium encoded with a computer program is a computer element which defines structural and functional interrelationships between the computer program and the rest of the computer which permit the computer program's functionality to be realized, and is thus statutory. See Lowry, 32 F.3d at 1583-84, 32 USPQ2d at 1035. "

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-90 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

The examiner invites applicant to call and schedule an interview prior to responding to this office action if there are issues in the above rejection which are not clear or if applicant believes it would be helpful to discuss the claim language required to overcome the rejections above. As the problems with the claim language are so numerous, it is not possible to do a proper comparison with the prior arts at this point. The examiner believes an interview to discuss acceptable claim language would expedite the prosecution of this case.
